Dear Guy,

Sorry about the delay. This is my first day back at the office after a few days with the Corona Committee and – on Saturday – the announcement that I will be running for public office in our general elections. Here in Germany we prefer to file civil complaints for damages. You cannot trust the administrative law courts, as almost all of them are completely in line with the government. And you can forget the DA's offices as well, they lack any independence. That's why the European Supreme Court ruled that they cannot issue, let alone enforce international arrest warrants. What we are doing is trying to get as many decisions as possible stating that PCR tests cannot detect infections and that there are no asymptomatic infections. We then use these decisions in the Anglo-American courts of law to help with class actions.

Attached, please find the most recent complaint (with all relevant information on the first 15 pages) against the German equivalent of Fauci, Mr. Wieler, first a German version, and then an English translation (only a deep one, though).

Reiner

Dear Dr. Fuellmich,

I knew you hadn't filed a case with the International Criminal Court (I never trust rumors). In which court do you want to argue against the Drosten PCR test?

I believe you will be doing a video conference this evening with Stéphane Blais (FDDL). I hope you will take this opportunity to "debunk" the fact that you haven't filed anything before the ICC. It will be profitable for all.

Thank you once again for responding to me.

Sincerely,

Guy BOULIANNE
